Senior Class Presents Gift

A check for $500 was presented to the University last Friday by the senior class to help finance the Milo Bail Fountain.

Herb Rhodes, class treasurer, presented the check to Dr. Leland Traywick at the Senior Day Convocation in the Milo Bail Student Center Ballroom.

Six members of the graduating senior class were honored for their outstanding achievements. Cynthia McMillan, with a 3.98 accumulative average, was presented the Alpha Lambda Delta Award by Dean Elizabeth Hill. A 3.9 average earned Mrs. Deanne Hammer the American Association of University Women Award, also presented by Dean Hill.

High Average

Dean John W. Lucas, dean of the college of business administration, presented the Delta Sigma Pi Award to Ernest L. Katzer for the highest male accumulative average in the business college. The Wall Street Journal Award was also presented by Dean Lucas to Gerald D. Skinner.

Gary Tallman, president of Delta Sigma Pi, presented the Paul T. Crossman Memorial Award to Ronald L. Rosberg. The American Institute of Chemists Award was given to Robert Langenbach by Dr. D. N. Marquardt.

'Do It, George'

Dr. Francis Hurst, presenting the charge to the class, said studies show that 75 per cent of students are content to sit back and "let George do it." "All of you will have responsibilities in any community in which you live. Stand up and be counted," he said, "don't be a 'let-George-do-it'."

A dinner dance was held for the graduating class at the Lamplighter Motor Inn Friday night. Dr. Ralph Wardle spoke at the event.

Dr. Ogborn's speech for the 6:30 banquet was entitled "Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy."

Trickett's Study Tour For Credit Cancelled

Omaha University's plan for a study tour to Europe for credit this summer has been cancelled. No credit will be offered for the tour since a sufficient number of people failed to register for the course.

Many of the people who did register to go on the trip will still travel to Europe though without credit. The tour will be handled under the auspices of Club Tours and The English Speaking Union.

Traywick Cites Planning Needs

By Linda Priesman

Dr. Leland Traywick, just back from a three-day meeting of the Association of College and University Governing Boards in Williamsburg, Va., explained the role of an advisory board to a college.

According to the President, the purpose of the state board or advisory commission is "not to run the details (of a college) but to have overall planning and coordination for higher education."

Only 13 states don't have these boards and Nebraska is one of them. Set up by the Legislature, the Governor determines who will serve.

Expansion

The great expansion of higher education has brought this need about. Dr. Traywick pointed out that in 1955 there were two and one-half million college students. Now there are five million and by 1970 there will be more than seven million students.

Both the population increase and the increase in the percentage of high school graduates attempting to go on to college has brought about this increase in students. Dr. Traywick says roughly 50 per cent of the Dr. Traywick high school grads are in this category.

However colleges and universities are geared to take only 30 per cent of these people. "Hence," as OU's president says, "there is a need for planning and coordination."

Planning

"Colleges and universities should get together and decide what is to done," Dr. Traywick continued. "We (universities) could be swept into state systems. We don't want to be a satellite of the University of Nebraska."

President Traywick feels that within the next two-four years Nebraska may have either a state board or advisory commission.

Presently there is a Junior College Bill before the State Legislature that could enable OU to receive state funds. One hundred and fifty dollars per year per freshman and sophomore student would be available for junior colleges and municipal universities.

Improvement

The money would be used to enhance and improve certain areas in the university that need it. OU is the only municipal university in the state. Junior colleges are located in Fairbury, McCook, Norfolk, North Platte and Scottsbluff.

In explaining how the legislature could appropriate such funds, Dr. Traywick said it would come from the treasury. However, the treasury is low. The income tax bill, though, could push this Junior College bill through.

Dr. Traywick and Dean George Rachford journeyed to Lincoln yesterday to await debate on LB 786. Shortly before noon Sen. Clifton Batchelder (Omaha) made a motion to kill the bill proposing state finances for junior colleges and municipal universities.

Senator Batchelder described the bill as "an attempt to get state aid for communities with junior colleges and not an effort to provide quality education."

"I hate to see Omaha University, in which I take so much pride, down here with its hand out; but I don't have the gall to ask the people of Weeping Water to help run OU," the Omaha Senator continued.

C. F. (Pat) Moulton, also of Omaha, counter-attacked Batchelder's remarks, saying, "OU and other schools take a tremendous load off the University of Nebraska and should thus receive financial aid."

Action was delayed for a noon recess.

No Increase

Commenting on the budget, the president explained how the University will receive added income from students if tuition doesn't rise. He said the added number of students will make up the difference. He reiterated that tuition definitely will not go up next year or the following year.

The fact that OU did not receive federal funds for the science - engineering building will "enable the University to financially keep afloat if we don't build," Dr. Traywick concluded.

Prexy Coffee Hour

President and Mrs. Leland Traywick will hold a coffee hour today for all faculty, staff, food service and physical plant personnel at 4 p.m. in the Milo Bail Student Center.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor

A strong and loud hurrah for "ONE CAP AND GOWN, ONE DIPLOMA!"

The letter addressed to "June, Graduates, 1965" thoroughly smothered all anticipation I had for being enthusiastic about commencement, becoming an alumna, or participating in the activities of graduation.

First, the University expressed not one word of congratulations to us for having arrived at the point of graduation. It left me with the impression the University of Omaha could care less that I was a candidate for a degree, or about to become an alumna who expected to support my Alma Mater. At this point, I feel like one of Aldous Huxley's decanted Alpa's; only minus the "soma" tranquilizer to make me forget the whole thing. This senior status conditioning becomes as an especially rude shock, because semester after semester dedicated professors at the University of Omaha have prodded, urged, and inspired me on to the goal of securing this initial degree.

I did not mind the change in commencement that dispensed with walking across the platform to pick up my degree, but I did resent being informed I would get my degree when I

Dalstrom Writes Of Eppley's Life

Dr. Harl Dalstrom, assistant professor of history, is writing a study of the life of Eugene Eppley, who at one time, owned the largest hotel chain in the world.

When he died, Mr. Eppley left about 28 million dollars in the Eppley Foundation. Dr. Dalstrom's project will be a combination study of Eppley's life and the direction his foundation has taken.

The history professor is writing the 150-page book for the Eppley Foundation. It will be completed sometime next fall.

Also contained in the biography is an interview with OU President Emeritus Milo Bail on what the Eppley Foundation has done for the University.

turned in my cap and gown. That piece of paper represents four years of arduous work, and I resent having it tossed at me when I turn in a rented, impersonal cap and gown.

My next two gripes revolve around the phantom baccalaureate we have had foisted upon us and a Senior Class Banquet at the Lamplighter. Who made all these decisions? I saw only one notice of a Senior Class meeting and it appeared in the Gateway. I usually pick up my Gateway at 11:20 on Fridays and the notice stated there would be a meeting of the Senior Class at 3 p.m. that same afternoon. I had a dental appointment scheduled at 2:30 and it was too late for me to change it. When I asked other students about the meeting, they had the same complaint—the notice was too late for them to make arrangements to attend. I have been told, the class officers called a second meeting, but the notice appeared after the date of the scheduled meeting. If this second fact is true, it is easy to understand why students finally give up in despair about taking an active part in class activities. While I am on this subject, I made five trips to the Milo Bail Student Center to pay my class dues and never found anyone to give them to. On three occasions I inquired at the information counter next to the Book Store, asking if they knew when the table was staffed. Each time I was informed, "There's been no one there today." And the people at the information desk were genuinely concerned, but helpless to remedy the situation. My complaint about the Lamplighter is purely personal, but I have talked to several seniors who share my sentiments: The place was inappropriate.

The American Indian is referred to as the "Vanishing American." I hope the University of Omaha's symbol of the Indian will not become a symbol of "vanishing enthusiasm" for our Alma Mater, because of continued poor communications.

Sincerely,
Margaret Pentzien, '65

Editorial Voice

In the past the GATEWAY has received many letters complaining about the Greeks and their "domination" of student elections. The usual cry is "An independent doesn't stand a chance to get elected."

Other predominant cries are, "It's just a popularity contest among the Greeks." And still another is, "If you belong to the right fraternity or sorority, you'll get elected. Otherwise, forget it."

Well, I think last week's runoff election between Pi Kappa Alpha member Buddy Belitz and unaffiliated Sandy Friedman should be proof enough for these "cryers." An article on page four of this week's GATEWAY tells that Friedman was elected to Sophomore Student Council. The two tied in the original election held May 12.

It should be noted that the new Student Council member did not have the official backing of any Greek organization. He won on his own merits.

It will be interesting to listen to the cries of the independents next fall when all-school elections are again held. Will the criticisms be the same? Will the non-joiner scream the same old words?

The purpose of this editorial is not to jab the unaffiliated; it is merely to point out that if they do unite and back one single candidate, they can win any and all elections on this campus.

The largest number of undergraduate degrees, 536, will be awarded in the area of General Education; 98 will be given in Education, the next largest area. There are eight candidates for M.A. degrees and 29 for M.S. degrees.

Future Doctor Will Specialize

"I'll be in my thirties before I actually start working," noted University of Omaha senior Arnold Fellman in discussing his future plans.

A startling statement for a 22-year-old graduating student to make? Not really. Fellman, a pre-med student was referring to the time when he can set up a practice as a specialist.

Ahead of him stretch four years at the University of Nebraska School of Medicine, one year of internship, two years mandatory service in the Army and three to five years study for his specialization.

A native of Omaha, Fellman began college as a pre-med student at the University of Wisconsin. A year-and-a-half later he transferred to the University of California in Berkeley where he spent a year studying architecture.

Really A Doctor

Realizing that medicine still held the greatest interest for him, Fellman then returned to Omaha and enrolled at OU.

During the school year, Fellman has worked as a tutor at the Omaha Home for Boys' Cooper Memorial Farm. This summer he will work as an assistant director at the Hummel Park Day Camp.

As a further source of income, Fellman and his wife Bunny perform as semi-professional folk singers. They are also half of a four-piece combo known as the "Sabres." Fellman plays piano for the combo and his wife sings. Fellman also plays flamenco guitar and gives guitar lessons.

Mrs. Fellman is a junior in elementary education at OU. She will work with her husband this summer as a counselor at the Hummel Park Day Camp.

Marguardt Announces NSF Grant For $8,100

Dr. D. N. Marguardt, head of the chemistry department, said that his department has received an $8,100 grant, on a matching basis, from the National Science Foundation. The money will be used to buy undergraduate instructional equipment for chemistry. Dr. Marguardt said that this new equipment should be found in a top-notch chemistry department.

This is the second grant which the department has received. Last year the chemistry department received a $4,000 grant also on a matching basis.

Tech Institute Staff Expands

The Science Department chairman at South High School visited OU to find a smoother transition between high school and college for his students. He left with a job as instructor in the Technical Institute.

Daniel C. Fahrlander is the new instructor. He has been at South High for three years.

He received his General Science degree from the University of Iowa. While getting his degree, he worked for Northwestern Bell Telephone Co.

He did some work in micro-waves during that time. He believes he has enough electronics and engineering experience to be of use to the Technical Institute's electronics options.

'Valuable'

Edwin Kinney, head of the institute agrees. "He will be a valuable addition to the tech. program," Kinney said.

Mr. Fahrlander is currently teaching a night course at OU in electronic vacuum tubes. "I am very enthusiastic about the two-year program. It is very good for people who don't have the money for four years. It is providing technicians which are in greater demand than engineers," he said.

Natural Interest

Mr. Fahrlander's interest in teaching comes naturally. His father has taught 15 years at the Milford Trade School. His mother is teaching in Lincoln. His sister is a speech therapist.

He has a definite philosophy about jobs. "A person must be willing to go where there is work. I have moved 12 times in 12 years. If I hadn't, I probably would still have been pumping gas in a small town," he commented.

In his spare time, Mr. Fahrlander is an amateur radio operator. He has a first class radio license.

Daniel Fahrlander and his wife and four children live in Sarpy County.

Hurst, Krehbiel Gain Honors As Omaha Salutes Athletes

Dr. Francis Hurst, Faculty Athletic Committee member, instructor of Psychology, timer, scorer and just plain booster, came out the big winner Sunday as Omaha University honored its athletes in the Student Center Sunday afternoon.

The annual All-Sports Banquet also honored the university's band, marching Indianans and outstanding individuals.

Dr. Hurst was presented with a silver cup by the O-Club for outstanding and generous service to athletes beyond the classroom. The OU athletic booster then received a special engraved plaque by Herb Rhodes, representing Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, for his efforts towards the sports programs in ten years at OU.

Krehbiel Tops

NAIA All - America pitcher Larry Krehbiel received the Alumni award as Omaha's outstanding athlete for 1965. Krehbiel also received his NAIA certificate.

Omaha University, barely tested while breezing through three games in the NAIA Area 3 South Playoffs, now must await the announcement of this weekend's opponent in the Area 3 finals for a spot in the national tourney.

The Indians, behind a pitching staff that allowed only one run in 27 innings of tournament competition, took the South Playoffs with a minimum of ease.

Mayville (N.D.) State and Minot, also of North Dakota, are playing their final game today to determine the Area's north district opponent for Omaha.

Mayville is the team that ended OU's win streak at 18 games last year as they whopped Omaha for the title and a trip to the national finals at St. Joseph, Missouri.

Omaha and the north winner will meet in a doubleheader Friday. First game begins at 6:30 and the second immediately afterward. If a third game is necessary in the double elimination set, it will be played Saturday night at 7:30.

Goose Eggs Galore

OU opened the tournament last Thursday with a 7-0 blanking of CIC titlist Pittsburg State. Omaha ace Larry Krehbiel threw a two hitter at the Gorillas before retiring in favor of reliever Jim Butler in the ninth. Butler got the last two out to preserve the shutout.

The Indians advanced to the finals later that evening with a 9-0 drubbing of Sterling (Kans.) College. First game fireman Butler, nominated to start and go as long as he could against the Kansas team, responded with a four-hit shutout and a tremendous display of control. The Council Bluffs native, who had worked only 11 innings going into the tourney, walked only one and struck out eight. He was never in trouble.

Meanwhile, Pittsburg was eliminated by Wayne, 4-3 and

Chi Omegas Take Top Beauty Honors As Gail Rowden Chosen Miss Omaha

Two OU coeds took top honors in the annual Miss Omaha pageant May 21, freshman Gail Victoria Rowden was crowned "Miss Omaha" and junior S. J. Johnson was named first runner-up. Both girls are members of Chi Omega sorority.

For Miss Rowden, it was the "second time around". Last year she was named a finalist in the pageant. The blue-eyed brunette is majoring in speech, and takes OU's Theater productions in her OU's Theater productions in spare time. This year she was a member of Indianans marching group and participated in the University choir. She was a dancer in OU's "South Pacific" and had the lead in the one-act play, "The Romancers". The 19-year-old graduate of Westside high works one night a week at the Omaha Art School. The petite Pente beauty is 5' 3".

First Runner-up S. J. Johnson was also named "Miss Congeniality", by vote of the seven Miss Omaha finalists. This was not her first beauty honor. In 1964 she was OU's Tomahawk Beauty Queen. Other honors she has accumulated: Theta Chi Sweater Girl, Rose of Delta Sigma Pi, and Honorary Major for the Arnold Air Society. She is a member of Angels Flight, for which she serves as Operations Officer, and is a marching angel. Miss Johnson is also a graduate of Westside high.

Contestants were required to present themselves in street attire, bathing suits, and formals. Performance of a talent and a question-answer period were the other requirements on which the judges' decisions were made. Gail did an original modern jazz dance to the "St. Louis Blues", and S. J. performed with a dramatic reading.

Miss Rowden's "frivolous" question was "What would you do if you had come to the Miss Omaha pageant and found another contestant with your exact formal on?" Gail replied that she would not let it bother her, and perhaps even compliment the other contestant on her taste. Her more serious ques-

Gail will compete for the Miss Nebraska title in York, Nebraska this summer.

Lydia White was elected Corral Queen by an all-Greek vote at Tau Kappa Epsilon's dance Saturday. The 21-year-old blonde was announced by master-of-ceremonies Tweedy Russell during intermission.

The fraternity presented Lydia with a lei of red carnations and a trophy. This is the first year the Tke's have given the winner of the honor a trophy.

school in Fort Dodge, Ia., her native city.

The first official act of the new leader will be holding tryouts for new members of the squad. The date of these tryouts has not been determined.

"The number of girls making up this year's squad will depend on the number of quality girls trying out," Georgeanne said. "Incoming freshmen will be given a chance to try out this summer."

Thus far 11 girls have been chosen for next year's marching team.

The Indianans will march during the halftime at all home football and basketball games. The group will also travel with the team to perform in Topeka, Kans., the weekend of Migration.

Georgeanne is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority for which she has served as courtesy chairman.

OU Student Designs Wardrobe To Earn Degree With Distinction

Does it seem possible to be able to create a four-year college wardrobe for about $60?

Liz Encell Bressler has done just that. The home economics major undertook special assignment in order to complete her degree-with-distinction project. It has taken her since February to complete the project. And what has she gotten for her work? Sore fingers, but a Home Economics degree with distinction!

The collection has a base in a grey flannel suit. Two formal outfits and two coats are included. Variations from grey color theme are found in a multi-colored Scandinavian sweater and bittersweet (deep orange) accessories. Three blouses, a pleated skirt, a pair of grey flannel shoes and two hats complete the collection. Exact total cost: $60.07. Miss Margaret Killian, head of the home economics department, suggested the project.

Mrs. Bressler, the bride of almost a year, designed some of the collection herself. She also took advantage of patterns that she had. She claimed special economic help by going to yard good sales, too.

On campus Liz is a member of Chi Omega sorority, and served as secretary of that group during the last year. She has been on OU's Ten Best Dressed List, and has been an officer of the Home Economics Club.
